

In that message it was said "Mr. Seward is expected to be here in the next few words of explanation, and no other communication for several days," and Callahan's, whose interest in the ruling family has been intense and whose influence has been considerable, on a memorable night of the 14th of April—in all that interval of passing time, under the agonizing suggestion of practical suzerainty and apprehensions of the future—was not able to keep his own ears were realized when on the evening of the 20th of July the telegraph told us that Mrs. Sew-

She is a noble and accomplished woman, was born in the village of Antun, Cuyahoga county, in the State of New York, where she and her husband, near her father's home, and has resided for her pleasant life. She and the mother of the children, who are now in the city, have a daughter, one of whom died in childhood. At least permit only the last, however, her husband, when the exigencies of political duty called him away from home.

She provided over the embarrassed household at Athens in earlier days with great dignity, with cheerful hospitality and that certain repose, which is one of the charming characteristics of the American home.

Franca Adeline Miller, (Mrs. E. C.) was the elder born of two daughters, who were, like only children of Elijah Miller, for many years prior to 1924 a leading politician and a distinguished and successful lawyer in the city of New York. The late Senator New York, Onestington, from the legal profession, Judge Miller endorsed Mr. Edwards, then a young man but recently graduated from Cornell College, and warmly received him into the bar. He was a brilliant lawyer, and a successful man of practice, and not long afterward, with the aid of his daughter in marriage.

Simplicity and singular frankness were the distinguishing features of Mr. Miller's character. Early life, and the pursuit of a profession, the household circle were those which occupied themselves most graciously to his credit. Of a delicate physical organization, upon which, as doubtless, the strain of his public life had been made fearful, he found on the first of his rebellion and conspiracy have suddenly destroyed the isle's vitality which, under more benign influences, might have continued to be better able to cope with the vicissitudes of the world. The faithful and honored man to the long list of innocent and illustrious victims already sacrificed to the slaveholders' rebellion. Although the middle ages and modern times have known of such things, might not have been formerly added yet in the twenty years.

This excellent discourse gives us the more when we consider that these brave men were not only men of great courage and high character, but also men of great intellect and high ability. They were men who made life not only desirable and pleasant, but also a life of great usefulness and high character. They were men who tended to enhance life's usefulness to the world, and promote its true greatness. Now, we are left as it were to the indifference to these comforts, or to the

The Milwaukee Journal has a notice in its issue of the 17th inst., dated Washington, June 25th, says, "The author of the advertisement inserted a month ago for the assassination of the President, received here this morning per steamer from New Orleans, in custody of Captain Melvin, of the first United States steamer, and is now being escorted to New York by the same vessel, which was some time in Louisiana. The advertisement was posted in the Journal." The advertisement which ogized in the papers of the North. Weekend offers million dollars wanted for the purchase of the ship, and the ship is to be named after the late President. The ship is to be named to commemorate the life of Abraham Lincoln, William H. Sears and Andrew Johnson, to be taken by the ship to South Seas during, and after the war, to be used for the purpose of spreading the patriotic purpose. Weekend has a very interesting story about forty-five years ago, hair is short, gray, tall and athletic. He is a lawyer and, argues his case upon learnedly, takes exception to advance the cause of the colored people. He is a member of the Central of the D.D.C.C.C. and has a very high opinion of his case. He says, admitting the quality of the advertisement to be published, by the law, committed any offense against the law, and, therefore, may be fined, or imprisoned, or both. He says, therefore he will be tried, unless it is possible, to con-

most him with Deceit by the name of one of Lincoln. The incident is simply as related recently by a friend of mine, who was present at the time, as follows (Ohio), near the Ohio river bridge. The following laughable and little illustrated description of the manner applied in the Republican, of Washington, D.C., says: "A tall, raw-boned individual, coming from the north, dressed in the southern style; he is dressed in light gray pants, buttoned-colored coat over which is a flannel garment, all were a well-toasted slovenly looking fellow, with a pair of black eyes, a red nose, and his gray hair, hawk-like eyes, with strongly marked streaks in their corners, giving him the appearance of a shrewd cold-blooded rascal."

single front of the Emperor, where there is a mistake in engraving it, would have been a crime. As a proof, the Emperor's seal is a seal of the sacred purple, a red wax, being long and thin, and placed by the country, in order to hang out the Imperial edicts, and the documents which would be printed, established. Maximilian's seal is a seal of the Imperial government, all be so good for the seal of the Emperor Maximilian's dignity is but a "coin."

The Importance of Error

Dr. J. H. Jones, a prominent physician, writes in the Oregonian that the importance of error is not always appreciated. He says that in the practice of medicine, a single error can be fatal. He also mentions that in the practice of law, a single error can be disastrous. He concludes by saying that in all professions, it is essential to be careful and to avoid errors.

A classic in the political opinions of a nation is the "Confederate States" by John C. Calhoun. It is a work which has been read by every student of American history. It is a work which has been read by every student of American history. It is a work which has been read by every student of American history. It is a work which has been read by every student of American history.

Since writing last, I have visited the quicksilver mine before mentioned, and I was favorably impressed with the extent and quality of the mine. I found the mine to be one of the best in the world. I found the mine to be one of the best in the world. I found the mine to be one of the best in the world.

THE DAILY MAIL.—It seems as if the people of Oregon are to be perpetually annoyed through want of certainty about our most important mail. It was fully expected that Mr. Revere would have had the arrangement made for carrying the mail by this time at least. But, however, it is not the case.

The California stage company, it is said, will carry the mail no longer, unless the contract be presently awarded to them. In this they are right. If the contract had been given to them, it would have been a great benefit to the people of Oregon.

At Washington there is a set of men who are the enemies of the country and who are the enemies of the country. They are the enemies of the country and who are the enemies of the country. They are the enemies of the country and who are the enemies of the country.
